
How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Abdun - 2009/01/14 03:01

Salaam,

please consider the best starting point of the establishment of a light, to demonstrate how a human being should exist and interact with both other human beings, and their natural world.

=====

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Vegetta - 2009/01/19 03:37

Salaam,

The main thing that comes to my mind is to somehow find like-minded individuals who see the importance of such a thing and are willing and able. After that it would be a matter of agreeing to the most sensible and convenient place for all involved.

=====

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Nibiru - 2009/03/15 07:00

Maybe a light will be established out of necessity from the imminent collapse of our current social structure, However it would be an advantage to have some sort of plans in place to avoid unnecessary suffering in the initial stages of this change.

=====

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Vegetta - 2009/03/17 04:08

Salaam Nibiru,

I think this is a very wise observation you have made here. I totally agree with you on both parts of your post.

On the one hand, as you have pointed out, most people will not be serious or committed about establishing the light UNTIL the imminent collapse of our current social structure (most notably the criminal banking cartel) is already upon them.

On the other hand, those who are serious and committed enough should AT LEAST make some sort of preparations for the day this does happen.

So now I believe we should begin the discussion on the best ways to do this.

Personally, I find it better to seek out those who have the same mindset on this issue as we do here at this forum. I have all but given up on trying to "Wake People Up".....

My first suggestion is to invite the people we know and trust to this forum share ideas on how to prepare ourselves and make that move when it's time.

Briane, Abdun-Nur where are you guys at? Let's get this thing started.

Regards,
Vegetta.

=====

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Abdun - 2009/03/17 06:20

Salaam Vegetta,

I'm still here brother, I have been investigating the legal structure we are forced to suffer, and considering the legal structure we should evolve towards, being natural law.

I have been investigating new and amazing realisations in physics, fluidic space and the underlying structural models of reality.

I have, after visiting Morocco a few weeks ago, realised the true significance of the direction presented within the Qur'an to demonstrate good manors, after suffering appalling manors from the people of Fez in Morocco.

In contrast I found a few notable, true Muslims, potentially Qur'anic Muslims, in Marrakesh.

I have been continuing to collect food, alone, I wish to establish a community but at this point would be standing alone I fear.

I'm open to ideas.

=====

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Abdun - 2009/03/17 06:55

Salaam Vegetta,

I'm still here brother, I have been investigating the legal structure we are forced to suffer, and considering the legal structure we should evolve towards, being natural law.

I have been investigating new and amazing realisations in physics, fluidic space and the underlying structural models of reality.

I have, after visiting Morocco a few weeks ago, realised the true significance of the direction presented within the Qur'an to demonstrate good manors, after suffering appalling manors from the people of Fez in Morocco.

In contrast I found a few notable, true Muslims, potentially Qur'anic Muslims, in Marrakesh.

I have been continuing to collect food, alone, I wish to establish a community but at this point would be standing alone I fear.

I'm open to ideas.

=====

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Nibiru - 2009/03/21 04:10

Salaam Vegetta

Thank you for your positive comments and I think your right now is the right time to make preparations. we must discuss and share ideas. As we already know people are not open to our concepts right now, but they will be soon.

So with that in mind I propose we create a safety net to help these people as much as we can. When everybody is hungry most people will hoard their supplies but we are not most people we will give people food and supplies and earn their trust and respect then they may be more inclined to listen to the truth rather than to listen to the establishment.

I've already started planting some veggies I know its not much but its a start and its a talking point the conversation inevitably leads to why am I growing veggies, then I tell them what I know is going to happen. They may not believe it now but when it happens they will want to know somebody who can make some sense out of it.

And hopefully they will want to help This I think is how we can bring people together to help grow food and raise livestock and generally help eachother to survive in a community.

There are other concerns though like sanitary water and energy supplies and housing and medical supplies the list goes on.

Regards Nibiru

=====

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by imraan - 2010/02/20 06:55

Salaams

This is my first post on your forum. Abdun Nur, we have had some interaction on freeminds. My id there is 1CELOSTNOWFOUND.

I live in South Africa. We are currently looking at the concept of moving towards the establishment of a community living by quranic values.

We held our first conference on this issue in August 2009. The theme was "Towards a Quranic Society". I think that this is the way to start. What we did was invite like-minded people from around the country to the conference. This was primarily made up of Quran Study groups who were focused on the Quranic message (not those groups who insist that some bearded guy who has studied fairy tales must lead any Quranic discussion). Once we did this, we were pleasantly surprised to find that there were more like-minded people around than we thought.

We then asked these like-minded groups to invite some selected people that they are familiar with who are open-minded & on the fringes of having the same goals we did. The result was a national conference that took place over two days with an average participation of 75-80 delegates per day. Attendance was by invitation only in order to stay focused & not get side-tracked with issues from the public about the validity of the Quran only concept.

While the first conference was a getting together of Quran minded people with some informative presentations on a range of topics, we have managed to sustain the interest & are about to host the 2nd national conference on the weekend of March 13 & 14 2010. We are maintaining the theme of "Towards a Quranic Society" with the sub-theme or focus being on "The Practical Way Forward". For this reason, the format will vary from that of the initial conference in that much more time will be given to work-shopping practical ways to move the ideas forward through committed individuals & groups.

At the first conference, we used ustream.tv for broadcasting the conference. I'm not sure if anyone from this forum caught the broadcast, but it would be great if we could get more participation via the streaming channel this time. It would be great if there are some of you that live in close proximity to each other could get together & watch the broadcast live and when we do break up for work-shopping, such a group could do the same & send input live so that you become an integral part of the conference.

If there are any groups out there who are interested in doing this, please let me know so that we can allocate time at the conference for your groups input at each work-shopped session. This does not mean that we don't want individuals watching & providing input. We would like to have as large an audience as possible from the international Quranic community, so please log on & check it out, participate & maybe even initiate steps towards an international conference soon.

Last year we did not use the ustream recording option, but hey, we were new to all this. This year, however, we will be recording the conference so that it is available to view on ustream at your convenience. Having said this, I would like to stress once again the fact that we are hoping for large live audience so that we have as much input as possible.

Just as we did last year, we would like to extend an open invitation to everyone out there to attend the conference if you would like. Just let me know & I will ensure that you are on the guest list. I know that it is extremely unlikely that people from further away will be able to attend, but we are particularly interested in people from the neighbouring countries such as Namibia, Botswana, Zimbabwe, Mozambique, Swaziland, Lesotho, Zambia and other parts of Africa. So, if you know anyone in these areas that would like to attend please let them know or forward their details to me so that I can get in touch with them.

We will forward further details in due course regarding streaming & how online participation will take place. I hope to hear from many of you on the weekend of the conference, & maybe a few of you before the conference to let us know that you have a group that would like to participate online.

I agree with your view of not being able to implement quranic values such as those concerning usury within the current system. It is necessary to create a vehicle through which we can live by the system set forth in the quran. The challenge is how do we move towards this from our present situation. This is what this second conference is about & your input will be appreciated & valued.

I noticed a little while ago that you were looking at a property for your cause in the UK. How has the response being? Have you made any progress?

Let's get together via email, skype, etc. & exchange some ideas on how we can succeed in this. I am of similar opinion with you regarding the development of communities that can build bridges between themselves in order to create a larger community that may not be in the same locality.

I look forward to working together to develop the necessary framework for ensuring success in this endeavour.

Imraan

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by adjwi - 2011/03/13 12:03

Salaam,

The best starting point would have to be with 96-1, or 1-1 chronologically. Iqra bismi rabika lathi halaq.

adjwi

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Abdun - 2011/03/13 16:22

Salaam Adjwa,

you think religion and praying is the way to establish a community?

The world is filled with religion and prayer, but misery is everywhere, how do you explain this?

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by zahid rehman - 2011/03/21 07:32

Salaam Br's,

I think the whole of humanity is the community and there are people in all groups who play role models, but not everybody follows or coppies them becasue of their own prejudices and benefits.

We should try and do things that benefit us and others at the same time, and not just those things that will only benefit us-alone.

don't you agree?

Peace.

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by adjwi - 2011/03/23 03:49

Salaam Abdun,

For starters you got the name wrong. It's adjwi, not adjwa. Unfortunately your post continues in the same direction. How your thought process arrives at such understanding of my post is beyond me. Please do explain. I mentioned nothing of prayer and religion; this comes from you.

What you didn't understand perhaps because little thought went prior to your response was that a model community was formed in the past and it was formed accompanied by the guidance of the qur'an as it was revealed to Mohammad.

My understanding is that it all began with iqra... and what was accomplished was deen, not religion. Nowadays it seems that the reading of the qur'an does indeed establish prayer to begin with. Wouldn't you think so?

So, my thought is that if the model community was established using iqra... then we should reflect if that should indeed be the starting point to achieve the same goal.

adjwi

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by adjwi - 2011/03/27 12:35

Salaam Abdun,

I'm dumb to understand your absence of response, what is it?

adjwi

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by Abdun - 2011/04/01 05:35

Salaam Adjwi,

sorry for the spelling mistake on my post, you seem annoyed in your tone, why?

I don't check the forum very often, iqra being the building of personal knowledge through study, yes this is an aspect of community, the sharing of skills, knowledge and resources.

Prayer really has nothing to do with Islam, it's an aspect of religion, the Islamic concept is in the expression of conceptual thought, I realise you do not wish to discuss this, so will not expand.

Iqra bismi rabika lathi halaq (Khalaaq)

What is your view on the meanings of these words?

Re:How would a model community be formed?

Posted by adjwi - 2011/04/03 01:05

Salaam Abdun,

My annoyance came from the fact that it sounded you hadn't read my post. Adjwi and adjwa doesn't sound the same. To me this was illustrated a lack of attention which was furthermore reflected in suggesting that my post had something to do with prayer. I make no allusion to prayer, nor religion for that matter. So there's no debate nor discussion on the subject brought forward by me.

What I'm pointing to is that a model community was formed in the past and accomplished with the leadership of Mohammed. The difficulty is indeed in perfecting a model because once the model is made, then the challenge is that of going into production. So that basically the challenge is that of building a community and perhaps communities throughout the world based upon the model developed in the past, adapted to present conditions.

Such a community would be based on knowledge, henceforth the accurate instruction of Iqra, read, learn etc... to begin with. The fact that islam has drifted into religion, away from consciousness is indicative of a relative approach becoming an absolute approach and the symbol of this rigidness is the qur'an. Innocent people were killed no later than yesterday based on some faith that the book was attacked and revenge was in order (rather disorder). It is forgotten that the present day order of the kitab is not that of revelation. This indicates a relative order, not an absolute one.

Can you situate where my reflection is?

=====